S3 Performance Update

- In July 2018, Amazon announced a massive increase in S3 performance

- 3,500 put requests per second
- 5,500 get requests

- This new increased performance negates the previous guidance to randomize your object keynames to achieve faster performance

- This means logical and sequential naming patterns can now be used without any performance implication